In accordance with the postulates of jurisprudence, the need to establish a balance of civil society institutions and a democratic rule of law in ensuring public order is substantiated in Ukraine. Arguments are given in favor of limiting the subject of administrative law and the grounds for administrative responsibility by public administration relations. From a scientific point of view, the necessity of isolating the branch of law that studies the social phenomenon "public order" is proven. It is advisable that the state regulation of the rules of conduct in social (public) places should be formalized in the Code of Public Order..
